It was a hot morning at the market. Dad had a van with boxes of books to sell. There was a low shelf, a higher shelf and the highest shelf at the top. Zak and Sam came to help. “Where do the books go?” said Sam.

Sam got an armful of books from a box. He put them in a neat line on the low shelf. “That is so useful!” said Dad. Then Sam saw a pile of boxes on the ground. He did not wait to be asked. He put the boxes in the van.

Soon the children came to the market. The low shelf was just right for them! They sat on the ground and looked at the books. Up on the highest shelf, the Cat had a nap. “Thank you, helper!” said Dad, and Sam felt joyful.
